ABBA

Although they did not release their first single until 1972, the story of ABBA began back in the mid-1960s when Björn Ulvaeus and Benny Andersson met for the first time. The two men were members of popular Swedish folk and pop groups, writing their first song together in 1966 and by the end of the 1960s had established themselves as a regular partnership. In 1969 Björn and Benny met Agnetha Fältskog and Anni-Frid Lyngstad (known as Frida), both successful solo recording artists, who would later become both the other half of ABBA as well as their fiancées.

At first the quartet worked together by contributing songs, vocals or melodies on tracks that each individual singer happened to be working on at the time, and by 1970 established their first venture together as cabaret act Festfolk. This was not a success, but in 1972 they recorded the song People Need Love which gained a reasonable following in their native Sweden.

At this time the group still went under the name 'Björn and Benny, Agnetha and Anni-Frid', and it was in this incarnation that they entered their first Eurovision Song Contest in 1973 with the song Ring Ring, which, despite not winning the contest, became a hit in a number of European countries and was the title track of their first album. The following year they had changed their name to ABBA (the members' initials, with permission from a Swedish fish company of the same name!) and entered Eurovision again with Waterloo. The rest, as they say, is history, the track winning the contest and reaching Number One in record charts all over Europe, even making the US Top Ten.

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA

The story of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (RPO) is colourful and dramatic with a reputation worldwide for music-making of the highest quality.

In 1946 Sir Thomas Beecham set out to create a world-class ensemble from the finest musicians in the country. Beecham envisioned an orchestra that would bring the greatest music to audiences across the world and, to this day, Beecham's legacy lives on.

Over the years, the RPO has become a byword for exceptional quality and versatility, undertaking a diverse range of activities from traditional performances in concert halls to classical spectaculars and 'cross-over' concerts in pop arenas.

The Orchestra is London-based and performs regularly at the Royal Albert Hall and Cadogan Hall. It uses its schedule in the capital as a springboard for a comprehensive regional touring programme. Internationally, the Orchestra undertakes a busy schedule with regular performances in Europe and tours to the USA, China and Azerbaijan.

The RPO has also enjoyed a long partnership with the major record labels, recording with some of the most well-known artists of our day. The Orchestra also has its own record label and currently has twenty-three discs in its popular Here Come The Classics™ series. These recordings reflect the diversity of the RPO's programming and include popular orchestral, choral and operatic repertoire, Viennese and film classics.

The Orchestra's forthcoming concerts include a great choice of world-renowned artists and a wide variety of repertoire, ranging from Holst's The Planets Suite and Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto to Symphonic Rock, ABBAphonic and Film Music Gala. The RPO also performs the live concert Best of Broadway at the Royal Albert Hall annually, with special guests from the world of West End and Broadway musicals.

Including 1973's Ring Ring, ABBA released a total of eight studio albums, with one nearly every year until 1981's The Visitors, not including additional 'Greatest Hits' compilation albums. The group gained particular popularity in the UK and Australia, occupying the Number One spots in these countries nine and six times respectively. Their only US Number One was Dancing Queen in 1977.

By the early 1980s the group began to lose focus, with each member concentrating on other projects – Björn and Benny planning the musical Chess and the girls looking to reignite their solo careers – and in 1982 announced their plans to take a break. Despite no signs of a reunion, the group have continued to enjoy massive popularity with films, numerous tribute acts, exhibitions and 'Greatest Hits' albums, the most popular arguably being ABBA Gold, which to date has sold over 26 million copies. In 1999 the phenomenally successful musical Mamma Mia! premiered in London's West End and since then, along with the Broadway version that opened in 2001, has been seen by over 30 million people worldwide and led to the hugely popular 2008 film starring Meryl Streep. ABBA's popularity shows no signs of receding, with an ABBA museum planned for Stockholm and continuing tribute shows and albums, not least including this one!

Mary Carewe is one of the UK's most accomplished and versatile concert and recording artists and is equally comfortable singing musical theatre showstoppers and cabaret songs as she is performing contemporary classical music. Her ability to interpret a composer's wishes and make the music her own means she is also in great demand in the studio for film, television and radio work.

Mary Carewe first came to international recognition through the Adiemus projects with Karl Jenkins – the mixture of classical orchestra and multi-tracked female chanting becoming an instant hit. Mary has continued to work with him regularly and features on his 2009 Christmas CD for EMI Stella Natalis. Mary Carewe's solo recordings include collections of West End, Broadway and film music for Chandos, Silva Screen and Warner Classics as well as a library of popular songs for Readers Digest (available on iTunes). She has recorded music by Thomas Adès for EMI, Britten for NMC, Peter Maxwell-Davies (Resurrection) for Collins Classics and her own collection of 'serious cabaret' repertoire - The Truth about Love - for ASV. With the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra she features on The Best of Bond - songs from the iconic James Bond movies - and collections of musical theatre songs and Christmas favourites.

On British television her voice is recognisable on many jingles including Autoglass and McCain's oven chips and she has also sung television theme tunes such as French and Saunders and The Wartime Kitchen and Garden. Her movie credits include cameos for Mona Lisa Smile, Alfie and The Sleeping Dictionary.

As a concert artist Mary Carewe has performed under the baton of Sir Simon Rattle, Kurt Masur, John Rutter, John Wilson and Charles Hazlewood and she is a regular guest of orchestras around Europe, Australia, Asia and the USA. She has a long established artistic relationship with Carl Davis and made her Carnegie Hall début with him and the New York Pops Orchestra in March 2009. In the UK she has sung with all of the country's leading orchestras including The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra with whom she has made numerous appearances at Cadogan Hall and the Royal Albert Hall in London.

As a recitalist, Mary Carewe has performed at such prestigious venues and festivals as the Théâtre du Châtelet in Paris, the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam, the Aldeburgh Festival, Festival de l'Île de France, Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation in Lisbon, Opera Butxaca in Barcelona, Cheltenham Festival, Berlin Philharmonie and the Maison de Radio-France in Paris. On stage she has appeared in revues of Sondheim, Cole Porter and Rodgers and Hart as well as playing Anna I in Kurt Weill's Seven Deadly Sins.

Mary Carewe was born into a very musical family but feels she was taught to sing by Agnetha and Frida as she was an avid ABBA fan as a child! She is thrilled to be involved with ABBAphonic.
